Anchor Week

Aside from football season, Anchor Week is a highlight of the fall semester for every Delta Gamma at LSU.

Anchor Week consists of a trio of events that allow not only DGs, but also their family and friends to join in the fun.

The kickoff is Night for Sight, an auction hosted at the Gamma Zeta chapter house. All items sold are donated from vendors throughout Baton Rouge, La., and proceeds go to Service for Sight.

The Saturday of Anchor Week was also the football game versus Auburn, so GZ hosted a game day tailgate on the front lawn that welcomed all DGs and their families before the early 2:30 kickoff and the 45-10 victory.

Wrapping up Anchor Week was Anchor Bowl on Sunday afternoon. Any group of boys and all fraternities created at least one team to participate in the highly anticipated flag football tournament, and DG's served as their coaches.

Foundation

Gamma Zeta has a close relationship with the Louisiana School for the Visually Impaired (LSVI), as it is their local philanthropy. Numerous events are held throughout the year that allow the chapter to interact with its many students.

Sep. 16 kicked off fall events, as Bingo Night was hosted at LSVI. Not long after, Karaoke Night took place on Oct. 20. Here, DG's sang songs for the many students, and the students showcased their talent for the chapter.

LSVI also holds many holiday events and parties. On Feb. 13, they hosted a Valentine's Day dance, and the chapter was invited to join in on the fun.

LSU student-athletes and students from the Louisiana School for the Visually Impaired flooded the Gamma Zeta Chapter house as our annual Fan Day kicked off on Feb. 27. Guest speaking at the event was soccer star Mo Isom, who spoke about the many challenges she's faced throughout her life. She was recently a guest on the Ellen DeGeneres Show for her determination to become the first female member of LSU's football team. After her speech, the many LSVI students were each given a chance to speak to Isom one-on-one, and they all grasped the opportunity to do so. The star athlete learned about all of their lives, struggles and hardships, and she inspired them to never let anything, including their sight, hold them back.

Fan Day

taught them a dance. Fan Day has been regarded as one of GZ's favorite events, as chapter members and the LSVI students both enjoy attending and meeting their favorite athletes every year.

The student-athletes in attendance ranged from SEC Champion football players to club sport athletes, like lacrosse and rugby players. The LSU Cheerleaders and Tiger Girls along with LSU's mascot, Mike the Tiger also interacted with all of the LSVI students. Snacks were provided in the dining room, and the LSU Cheerleaders put on a small pep rally here, as they performed LSU chants. They taught the LSVI students the cheers and, the Tiger Girls even

Fun Friday

The first ever Fun Friday was hosted at the Gamma Zeta house on Sept. 16th. It was an afternoon of fun and food, as a moon bounce was set up on the lawn. The event was such a success that the tradition was repeated in the spring semester on Jan. 27, and it is now a regular semiannual event.

Milk & Cookies

Chapter members and boys participating in the event sat on the patio for live music by Travis Ewing and milk and cookies.

Another new GZ event began in the spring, as DG Milk and Cookies was hosted April 22 at the DG house. Tickets were sold beforehand, and all proceeds went to Service for Sight. The main event was the cookie-eating contest, where each fraternity was represented by one person who fought to win the $250 prize. Alpha Gamma Rho's Jordy Bloodsworth took home the victory.

Homecoming

Delta Gamma, Sigma Nu and Delta Kappa Epsilon's lawn decorations took home a second place finish.

LSU-themed "Wizard of Oz" decorations covered the lawn of the GZ house for the Homecoming theme of "There's No Place Like Home." Delta Gamma was paired with Sigma Nu and Delta Kappa Epsilon this year, and their hard work and original lawn decorations to the theme of "Follow the Red Stick Road" earned an overall second-place finish. The DG, DKE, ΣN trio also won third place in the Flag Football tournament.
